Q3: When is the GST report available in the supply panel?

A: The GST report is available throughout the month. When requesting the report, ensure you select the date range from the 1st to the last day of the month. Ideally, this request should be made by the 5th of the subsequent month to ensure that all dispatches up to the last day of the previous month are reflected accurately. Remember, according to law, all dispatches and returns for a particular month should be included in the GSTR1 report for that month, regardless of payment status.

Q4: What orders are covered in the GST report?

A: The GST report includes details of invoices related to dispatched orders within the month, as well as credit notes for orders returned during the month, irrespective of their payment status.

Q5: Why should I file GST return based on dispatch date rather than delivery date?

A: As per GST law, any goods which is dispatched from the premises for delivery should be accompanied by valid tax invoices. Accordingly, the GST returns will have to be filed based on dispatch date and not delivered date. For any returned goods, proper credit note should be issued to give the correct picture of the entire transaction.

Q6: Should I file GST return for all dispatched orders, even if the delivery percentage is low?

A: Yes, all dispatched orders should be included in the GSTR1 based on the GST report. For orders in transit in one month but returned in the subsequent month, credit notes should be issued in the following month. These orders will be part of the next month's GST report. You can file credit notes for those returned orders in the following month to give effect to invoices raised in previous month based on dispatched date.

Q7: Will I receive a credit note for returned orders?

A: Yes, the GST report includes details of credit notes for orders returned within the same month.

Q8: Where can I find credit note on the supplier panel?

A: Credit notes related to returned orders can be found within the GST report. Look for the column labeled "GST Invoice TYPE," where "INV" refers to invoices for dispatched products and "CN" refers to credit notes for returned products.

Q9: There is mismatch in the orders reported in GST report vs TCS deposited. I use the details as per TCS deposited in my GSTIN as the same is reported to the GST department. Why should I follow GST report and not TCS details?

A: As per GST law, any goods which is dispatched from the premises for delivery should be accompanied by valid tax invoices. Accordingly, the GST returns will have to be filed based on dispatch date and not delivered date. For any returned goods, proper credit note should be issued to give the correct picture of the entire transaction.

The GST report includes details of invoices related to dispatched orders within the month, as well as credit notes for orders returned during the month.

As per GST law, the liability to deduct TCS is at the time of making payments and thereby it is deducted at the time of making payments on weekly basis. TCS details does not include all the dispatched and returned orders, which is why there can be a gap between the GST report and the TCS details.

The gap between the GST report and TCS details will be temporary timing gap and will reconcile on a rolling basis.

Q10: I have been filing GST return basis the TCS deposited against my GSTIN. What should I do now to reconcile the difference as on date if I need to file GST return as per GST report?

A: Perform a one-time reconciliation between invoices reported as per the payment sheet and the GST report. Include any invoices not reported in the GSTR1 in the next month's return, with the invoice date as the dispatch date and credit notes as the return date.

Q11: Am I eligible for E-Invoicing ?

A: E-invoicing applies to GST registered entities with an aggregate turnover exceeding Rs. 5 crore in any previous financial year (since 2017-18). Consult with your consultant or CA for guidance on enrolling for E-invoicing.

Q12: How do I generate E-Invoices?

Q14: What is the due date to file GSTR1?

A: The due date for filing GSTR-1 is 11th of the following month.

Q15: Can missing invoices be filed in the next month's return?

A: Yes, missing invoices can be included in the subsequent month's return, maintaining the original invoice date.

Q16: Who assigns the invoice series?

A: The GST report contains details of the invoice number, which you should use for filing returns.

Q17: Should I use the invoice series provided by the company?

A: Yes, it's essential to follow the invoice series provided in the GST report to ensure seamless input credit for purchasers.

Q18: What are the consequences of not following the invoice series as per the GST report?

A: Failure to adhere to the invoice series specified in the GST report may result in purchasers being unable to claim input credit due to discrepancies in invoice numbers. Consequently, the affected amount will be withheld from your weekly payments until the issue is resolved.

Q19: What happens if I don't file GST return on time?

A: We encourage all suppliers to file GST return within the due date. Failure to file GST on time may result in purchasers being unable to claim input credit for purchases made from you. Your store ID will be marked as a defaulter, and the input credit amount will be withheld from your weekly payments until rectified.
